

Selected Findings from the Second European Union Minorities and Discrimination Survey (EU-MIDIS II)

Information collected from almost 34,000 persons living in Roma households in nine European Union (EU) Member States and from nearly 8,000 face-to-face interviews with Roma derived disconcerting results. This survey was conducted as part of the agency's commitment to collecting and publishing data on groups not covered in general population surveys. It is the third survey of the Fundamental Rights Agency with a focus on Roma.

Based on this survey FRA published a report with selected findings. This report highlights persisting barriers to employment, education, housing and health services. It also reveals that four out of 10 Roma surveyed felt discriminated against at least once in the past five years – yet only a fraction pursued the incident.

These findings can serve as a valuable resource to enable policy-making which ensures equal treatment for Roma people.

The published report can be found here.
